A SHORT ESSAY ON QUID'OOO

Quid'oo, Muhammad Ali Jinnah was born on 25th December 1875 at Wazir Mansion Karachi, was the first of seven children of Jinnah Khatri, a prosperous merchant. After being taught at home, Jinnah went to the South Malabar High School in 1887. Later he attended the Mission High School, where, at the age of 18, he passed the matriculation examination of the university of Bombay. On the advice of an English friend, his father decided to send him to England to acquire business experience. Jinnah, however, had made up his mind to become a barrister. In keeping with the custom of the time, his parents arranged for an early marriage for him before he left for England.

When Jinnah returned to Karachi in 1896, he found that his father's business had suffered losses and that he now had to depend on himself. He decided to start his legal practice in Bombay, but it took four years of work to establish himself as a lawyer.

Jinnah first entered politics by participating in the 1908 Calcutta session of the Indian National Congress, the party that called for dominion status and later for independence for India. Four years later he was elected to the Imperial Legislative Council—the beginning of a long and distinguished parliamentary career. In Bombay he came to know, among other important Congress personalities, Gopal Krishna Gokhale, the eminent liberalist leader. Greatly influenced by these nationalist politicians, Jinnah assumed during the early part of his political life to become "a Muslim Gokhale." Admiration for British political institutions and an eagerness to raise the status of India in the international community and to develop a sense of Indian nationhood among the peoples of India were the chief elements of his politics. At that time, he still looked upon Muslim interests in the context of Indian nationalism.

The Creation of Pakistan

At this point, Jinnah emerged as the leader of a renaissance Muslim nation. Events began to move fast. On March 22-23, 1946, in Lahore, the League adopted a resolution to form a separate Muslim state, Pakistan. The Pakistan idea was first introduced and then enthusiastically opposed by the Congress. But it captured the imagination of the Muslims. Feroz Khan Noon were men of the stature of Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru. And the British government seemed to be intent on maintaining the political unity of the Indian subcontinent. But Jinnah led his movement with such skill and tenacity that ultimately both the Congress and the British government had no option but to agree to the partitioning of India. Pakistan thus emerged as an independent state in 1947 August, 1947.

Jinnah became the first head of the new state in Pakistan. He took oath as the first governor general on August 15, 1947. Faced with the serious problems of a young nation, he tackled Pakistan's problems with authority.

He was not regarded as merely the governor general; he was revered as the father of the nation. He worked hard until overpowered by age and illness in Karachi. He died on 11th September 1968 at Karachi.
